Purpose without Blame - Clinician dialogue

Guide a collaborative conversation about purpose without blame while checking fit and participant choice.

Fictional example: Morgan withdraws from a group when conversation becomes competitive.

Invite and obtain permission

Offer: "Would it be useful to explore purpose without blame using an ordinary or fictional example? We can adapt it, observe, or stop." Ask what the person wants from the conversation.

Elicit before teaching

Ask: "How does this show up, if at all, in your own words?" Offer this idea tentatively: A behavior can have a short-term function without being deliberate or freely chosen. Ask what fits and what does not.

Guide the task

Explore what a coping behavior helps avoid or obtain and list contextual pressures before considering alternatives. Ask for permission before giving an example. Use this fictional illustration if useful: Morgan withdraws from a group when conversation becomes competitive.

Reflect and check accuracy

Reflect only what was offered: "I heard you describe ___. What did I miss?" Ask: What need does the withdrawal serve, and what else might support it? Avoid assigning motives or interpreting silence as agreement.

Respond to a mismatch

If the person rejects the frame, say: "Thank you for correcting it. What would be more useful?" Return to their language or choose a different approach.

Close with agency

Ask which observation, question, or support request the person wants to keep. Confirm a manageable ending and appropriate follow-up; do not turn a tentative possibility into a homework obligation.

Reflection

What would tell me to adapt, stop, or seek supervision?

Scope and adaptation

Explore patterns as collaborative hypotheses. Do not infer personality from sibling position, treat recollections as recovered facts, blame people for coping, or frame structural inequality as a lack of effort.
