De-escalation Review - Clinician dialogue

Guide a collaborative conversation about de-escalation review while checking fit and participant choice.

Mental health professionals | 15 minutes

Fictional example: Alex and Sam still disagree but return after a planned break.

Invite and obtain permission

Offer: "Would it be useful to explore de-escalation review using an ordinary or fictional example? We can adapt it, observe, or stop." Ask what the person wants from the conversation.

Elicit before teaching

Ask: "How does this show up, if at all, in your own words?" Offer this idea tentatively: Reduced escalation is meaningful even before deeper bonding work. Ask what fits and what does not.

Guide the task

Review a recent manageable conversation for slower pace, fewer assumptions, or a workable repair. Ask for permission before giving an example. Use this fictional illustration if useful: Alex and Sam still disagree but return after a planned break.

Reflect and check accuracy

Reflect only what was offered: "I heard you describe ___. What did I miss?" Ask: What changed in the process even though the issue remains? Avoid assigning motives or interpreting silence as agreement.

Respond to a mismatch

If the person rejects the frame, say: "Thank you for correcting it. What would be more useful?" Return to their language or choose a different approach.

Close with agency

Ask which observation, question, or support request the person wants to keep. Confirm a manageable ending and appropriate follow-up; do not turn a tentative possibility into a homework obligation.

Reflection

What would tell me to adapt, stop, or seek supervision?

Scope and adaptation

Joint exercises require private safety assessment, voluntary participation, and appropriate EFT training. Do not invite joint vulnerability, enactments, or disclosure where coercion, violence, fear, or retaliation may be present. Use individual support and appropriate referrals instead. This collection concerns attachment-based Emotionally Focused Therapy, not tapping or Emotional Freedom Techniques.
