Emotion and Urge Are Different - Cooperative Planning Workshop

You may write, draw, think quietly, use fiction, observe, or pass. Share only what you choose. This educational activity is not a test.

Fictional example: A member feels anger and wants both to withdraw and to use.

1. What is known in the fictional example, and what needs checking?

2. Distinguish an emotion, an action urge, a substance-use urge, and a chosen response. My notes, drawing, or possible response:

3. What becomes clearer when these experiences are separated?

4. One optional next step, support, or reason to revise the idea:

You can pause or stop. Ask your facilitator for an alternative if this does not fit. No identifying information belongs in shared copies. Independent clinical review pending.
