Grief for the Assumed Relationship - Clinician dialogue

Guide a collaborative conversation about grief for the assumed relationship while checking fit and participant choice.

Mental health professionals | 15 minutes

Fictional example: Lee misses the certainty they previously felt.

Invite and obtain permission

Offer: "Would it be useful to explore grief for the assumed relationship using an ordinary or fictional example? We can adapt it, observe, or stop." Ask what the person wants from the conversation.

Elicit before teaching

Ask: "How does this show up, if at all, in your own words?" Offer this idea tentatively: Grief can concern lost expectations as well as the relationship's future. Ask what fits and what does not.

Guide the task

Name expectations or meanings that changed and identify support without prescribing stages or closure. Ask for permission before giving an example. Use this fictional illustration if useful: Lee misses the certainty they previously felt.

Reflect and check accuracy

Reflect only what was offered: "I heard you describe ___. What did I miss?" Ask: What loss needs acknowledgment without being rushed toward a lesson? Avoid assigning motives or interpreting silence as agreement.

Respond to a mismatch

If the person rejects the frame, say: "Thank you for correcting it. What would be more useful?" Return to their language or choose a different approach.

Close with agency

Ask which observation, question, or support request the person wants to keep. Confirm a manageable ending and appropriate follow-up; do not turn a tentative possibility into a homework obligation.

Reflection

What would tell me to adapt, stop, or seek supervision?

Scope and adaptation

Joint work requires private assessment of coercion, violence, fear, and retaliation. Do not require graphic disclosure, passwords, surveillance, reconciliation, forgiveness, or sexual contact. Accountability for deception is not assigned to the hurt partner. Support individual agency and appropriate medical, legal, or safety consultation without using this worksheet as professional advice.
